ABSTRACT

The third annual report of doctoral program changes at institutions in the west, conducted by the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education (WICHE), is presented. Information included in the report was compiled from a survey of doctoral-level private institutions and state higher education agencies in the 13 WICHE states. Data are presented on program changes from July 1, 1978 through June 30, 1979 by discipline specialties and Higher Education General Information Survey (HEGIS) code. Summary data on approved, terminated, or adjusted doctoral programs by state for public institutions and by institution or private institutions are included. A brief description of each program and the changes made in it are included. (SW)

WICHE

The Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education is a nonprofit agency created in the 1950s by the governors and legislatures of the 13 western states. Through interstate sharing and research, WICHE helps states provide high-quality, cost-effective higher education to meet the human resource needs of the states and the education needs of the citizens. WICHE serves Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming.

Project Intent

WICHE's project on Expanding Regional Cooperation in Graduate and Professional Education encourages resource sharing in graduate and professional education in the West by providing information about these programs throughout the region. The project is establishing an information system that will enable higher education decision makers to plan for the future of graduate and professional education from a regional perspective. The graduate education project is supported by a two-year grant from the Carnegie Corporation of New York and by WICHE state dues through its Student Exchange Program.

The project seeks to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of graduate education in the West so that both students and taxpayers are better served.

INTRODUCTION

This publication, the third annual report of doctoral program changes at institutions in the West, is a service of the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education (WICHE) Project on Expanding Regional Cooperation in Graduate and Professional Education. Information included in this report was compiled from a survey of doctoral-level private institutions and state higher education agencies in the thirteen WICHE states (as listed in the NCES Education Directory 1978-79). The program status information for public institutions submitted by the state higher education agencies may not list all program terminations because termination decisions are often made internally by institutions and are not required to be reported to the state agency. Colorado and Utah specifically reported monitoring of "low producing" programs.

While this report presents information and data about program changes at the doctoral level at institutions in the West with no attempt at analyses, some observations may be helpful:

1. Slightly fewer new programs were approved in 1978-79 than in each of the previous four years.
2. Three new programs were approved in the biological sciences (more than in any other discipline). Two programs were approved in education, in letters and in computer and information services.
3. No program terminations were reported.
4. More program adjustments occurred this past year than in any one of the previous four years with the exception of 1977-78.

A summary of program changes for each of the past four years by HEGIS discipline specialities appears in Table A.

REPORT OF ANNUAL SURVEY OF PROGRAM CHANGES

Data compiled in the study are reported in the following tables:

- Table 1 reports on changes which occurred July 1, 1978, through June 30, 1979, at both public and private institutions.
- Table 2 displays a detailed report of doctoral program changes by HEGIS categories at all western institutions from July 1, 1978, through June 30, 1979. A brief description of each program and the changes made in it are included in this table.

For those instances in which the respondent did not supply the HEGIS code for a program, the space for the four-digit HEGIS code has been left blank. However, the program has been listed under the general two-digit code which was judged most appropriate from the program description.

For some programs respondents did not provide a description.
